Letters to the Editor

Nurses appreciate Valentine's Day gift

On Feb. 13 the nightshift nurses on duty were pleasantly surprised by a gentleman who came by and presented a beautiful, long-stemmed red rose to each of them. It will be a Valentine long remembered. Thank you Jack for your kindness.

Sincerely,
Patty, Grace and Mary

In memoriam

Willi Ng

Willi Ng, born in Weiden, Germany on March 2, 1948, died Dec. 26 after a short, courageous struggle with cancer, according to his sister-in-law, Liz Ng. Willi graduated from Waialua High School and the University of Hawaii. He was employed as a federal contractor on the Island of Kwajalein for the past 20 years. Willi loved to travel around the world and made many friends wherever he visited, said Liz. He leaves behind his wife, Anne; parents, Lawrence and Marie Ng; sister, Loretta (Gordon) Lodahl; brothers, Manfred (Arlene) Ng and Kurt (Liz) Ng; nephews and nieces Brian (Kim), Heidi (Adrian), Noah, Annaliese, Konner, Lindzey, and Kaitlin; great nephews Alex and Avery; great niece, Sofia. He also leaves behind many family and friends in Germany, Hawaii and Kwajalein, said Liz. "A bright shining light has left this world," she said. "We were blessed to have had Willi in our lives for so many years. We would like to thank all his friends who made his life so special and wonderful. A special thank you to Dr. Michelle Miyashiro and the staff and nurses at Queen's Hospital (Honolulu) who helped him so much. We will miss Willi's big beautiful smile, generosity and kind heart." Services were held at Mililani Memorial Mortuary on Jan. 3 and his ashes were spread over the waters fronting Sheraton Moana Surfrider Hotel and Haleiwa Boat Harbor on Jan. 22.

SpaceX plans launch from Omelek this summer

By Mig Owens
Assistant Editor

A private space launch company called SpaceX is preparing to break ground on a launch pad on Omelek Island in early April. In conjunction with the project, the company plans to set up office and warehouse space on Kwajalein.

The first SpaceX launch from Omelek is scheduled for this summer according to Phil Macklin, Kwajalein Range Service vice president and deputy program manager for Continental U.S. Operations, said.

Founded by entrepreneur Elon Musk, the company aims to reduce the cost of putting payloads into space while increasing reliability. While normal light payloads cost about $24M, SpaceX wants to deliver a $6M business model for small to medium payloads, Macklin said.

The purpose of SpaceX's launch from the Kwajalein Atoll is to demonstrate responsive launch capabilities for the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency Force Application and Launch from the Continental United States program.

SpaceX is competing with three other companies; Lockheed Martin, Air Launch and Microcosm under the second phase of a DARPA contract Macklin said. The winner will be chosen to proceed with production of a low-cost, responsive launch vehicle.

According to Macklin, SpaceX is already planning future launches from Omelek and other islands as the demand increases for an equatorial site with the infrastructure only available at RTS.

Macklin said that this customer and future customers will utilize Kwajalein's uniqueness including its equatorial location, which offers 16 percent more payload capability, and its "space-launch-friendly geolocation," where upper-level winds are the least in this area of the Pacific, enhancing space launch vehicle stability in flight.

Also a plus for customers is Kwajalein's existing infrastructure, radar, telemetry, optics, instrumentation and the government contractor expertise already present at the United States Army Kwajalein Atoll/Reagan Test Site.

USAKA/RTS has been working with SpaceX since June 2003 and is considered a customer much like any other test customer such as Ground-Base Midcourse Defense, National Aeronautics and Space Administration or the Air Force.

Macklin said that the project will lead to a whole new market for RTS and "augment USAKA/RTS/KRS operating budget that has some challenges in the out-years."

"This initial terrestrial space launch by SpaceX from USAKA/RTS promises future space port business as other companies and agencies are already inquiring and requesting rough order of magnitude estimates for what it would cost to launch from Kwajalein," Macklin said. "We remain cautiously optimistic about this new customer base."

“ The project will lead to a whole new market for RTS and augment USAKA/RTS/KRS operating budget that has some challenges in the out-years. ”

— Phil Macklin, Kwajalein Range Services vice president and deputy program manager for Continental U.S. Operations

Missile defense flight test conducted Feb. 14

Missile Defense Agency
NewsRelease

The Missile Defense Agency announced Feb. 14 it was unable to complete a planned flight test after the interceptor missile did not launch from the Ronald Reagan Test Site, Republic of the Marshall Islands, in the central Pacific Ocean. The reason for not launching is under investigation, and program officials are reviewing data to determine the cause. Preliminary indications point to a fault with the ground support equipment, not the interceptor missile. A target missile carrying a mock warhead was successfully launched from Kodiak, Alaska at 9:22 p.m., Feb. 13 Alaska Standard Time (1:22 a.m., Feb. 14 Eastern Standard Time).

Safety Alert !

Joggers, walkers and bikers must stay away from the K-9 kennel. Do not use the dirt road that goes past this kennel area. It is a restricted area with working police dogs. They are not pets. Entering into this area causes the dogs to get excited and could be dangerous. Dog training includes letting a dog go without a leash to respond to voice commands. In this situation, entering into the K-9 area when a working dog is off lease-control could result in a person being bitten. Warning signs are posted at both entrance points and on the kennel fence. The prudent step is to obey them.
